

COMPANION PROGRAM FAQ

"Love must be relearned."

— Coleo Foridae, founder and president

What is a Companion?

A Companion is an advanced cybernetic android, a teaching tool, a learning machine, a trusted confidant, and a beloved friend. Designed to mimic, learn, and modify human behavior, the Companion is the most advanced noninvasive, non-narcotic therapeutic device ever conceived, making it the ideal tool for human development, from treating disorders to inspiring personal growth. At once less and more than human, a Companion is humanity's helpmate for the new millennium.

How does the Companion Program work?

The Companion Program treats conditions like dissociative disorder by teaching empathic human connection. Accounting for the power of the adolescent male libido, the program utilizes operant conditioning (or "punishment and reward") to discourage dehumanizing behavior and reinforce relationship development.

Is the Companion Program right for me?

Currently, the Companion Program is prescribed for sufferers of dissociative disorder and similar conditions. If you are or have been experiencing feelings of disconnection, emotional flatness, self-consciousness, uncertainty, depression, isolation, or dissatisfaction, ask your doctor about Sakora's Companion Program.

Caution:

- Patients with heart conditions should not participate in the Companion Program.
- Patients suffering from epilepsy or who have a family history of strobe-induced seizures should not participate.
- Patients with pacemakers, metallic bone pins, or metallic fillings are strongly discouraged from participating in the Companion Program.

What is an Intimacy Clock?

Your Companion's Intimacy Clock measures the growth of your empathic connection to your Companion over time. As your relationship deepens — through communication, shared experience, and mutual understanding — more intimate forms of physical connection become available.
